

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.

“Detachment” is not detaching from the one you love or care about, it’s about detaching from the agony of involvement.